

I have been a meth addict for almost 12 years, I have ruined relationships with my family members, friends and women I love because of my addiction.

I've lost cars, my home and all the things I worked for because of my inability or unwillingness to stop.

I have been struggling to stay clean for the last three months and was sitting down with my pipe and 3 grams and as I was going to take my first hit your story came on ESPN. Your story interested me so I put down the pipe and watched the segment.

After the story was finished I flushed the dope and broke my pipe, hearing your story has inspired me to strive to stay clean and has shown me that if you put as much effort into life as you being an addict you can rebuild your life and become a better person for yourself and everyone else.

You sacrifice so much to help other people regain their lives and put them on a positive track in life I felt the need to write you and say thank you for all you do for every one of us who needs an inspiration to turn our lives around and stay on the right path.

Thank you again for being there for me and every other addict you have and ever will help.

Sincerely,

Jason
